Brian's practice focuses on complex civil litigation, including personal injury, general liability, professional liability, and premises liability. He has extensive experience handling high-value and complex cases from inception to resolution and has engaged in all aspects of discovery, depositions, motion practice, mediation, arbitration, and trial.

Representative Matters

- In a breach of contract dispute, we secured a mid-five-figure settlement in a case involving claims of misrepresentation and fraud in the sale of a home later found to be in a 55+ community. The plaintiff sought inflated damages due to COVID-19-era real estate trends, but key correspondence revealed they were aware of the age restrictions, allowing us to negotiate a favorable resolution.

(WSBA)

- In a motor vehicle accident case, we secured a complete defense verdict for our elderly disabled client, who was being driven to the hospital when the plaintiff sustained an injury resulting in a three-level fusion procedure. Despite an eight-figure demand, we eliminated liability after a lengthy trial.
- In an ongoing wrongful death case against our client, the estate seeks damages after the decedent was fatally injured during an altercation that escalated to the sudden use of firearms in a crowded parking lot.
- Defending a local city government against allegations of unsafe road conditions, where the plaintiff claims an uneven patch of roadway caused him to lose control of his vehicle and collide with oncoming traffic. The plaintiff underwent a multi-level fusion procedure and is seeking an eight-figure recovery for alleged lifelong cognitive and emotional damages, pain and suffering, future care needs, and economic losses.
